CRAWFORD IN FINAL
JIRO SATOH ELIMINATED IN FOUR SETS

Australian To Meet Ellsworth Vines.

GERMAN PAIR WIN

London, To-day.

Jack Crawford reached the Final of the Men's Singles Championship at Wimbledon yesterday when he beat Jiro Satoh by 6-3, 6-4, 2-6, 6-4. He will meet Ellsworth Vines, the holder, on Saturday.

Vines and Crawford hold the four major tennis titles in the world between them. Vines is the Wimbledon and American champion, and Crawford holds the French and Australian titles.

Crawford beat Satoh in straight sets in the semi-final of the French Championships, and ultimately won the title from Henri Cochet. Satoh, however, beat the Australian in the Davis Cup after the Australia had made certain of victory against Japan. Satoh was beaten by Bunny Austin in the semi-final at Wimbledon last year.

Vines entered the Final at the expense of Henri Cochet, the famous Frenchman. He won their third encounter in four sets. On the previous occasions that these two have met Vines won the American Championship in straight sets and beat Cochet in the Davis Cup.

ITALIAN AIR ARMADA

23 Planes Arrive In Iceland.

SUCCESSFUL THIRD STAGE OF ATLANTIC FLIGHT

Reykjavik, Iceland, To-day.

The Italian air Armada, consisting of 23 seaplanes under the command of the Italian War Minister, General Balbo, arrived here at 4.55 p.m. yesterday, from Londonderry, Ireland. The flying boats left Londonderry at 1 p.m. yesterday.

From Reykjavik, the Armada will fly to Cartwright, Labrador, the most difficult stage of their journey. From Labrador they will fly via Montreal to Chicago.

FRENCH PILOT KILLED IN MOTOR SMASH

After Promising Bride Not To Fly Again

London, To-day.

The Paris airman, M. Robida, hero of the Paris-Hanoi flight with M. Codos, last year, was yesterday killed in a motor smash.

He was married recently and had promised his bride that he would not fly again.—Reuter.

WALTER HAGEN LEADS BY TWO IN BRITISH OPEN

Two British Players Second.

DUDLEY'S INSPIRED GOLF

London, To-day.

Walter Hagen, four times winner, heads the field with a 68 in the First Round of the British Open Golf Championship at St. Andrew's.

Cyril Tolley, E. D. Dudley the American international, and J. Fernie, of Lytham, are two strokes behind the famous American.

The Prince of Wales, who mingled with the crowd almost unrecognised, watched Dudley's inspired golf over the first nine. The American was out in 31. Here are his figures.

4 5 3 4 3 2 3 3 = 31

Dudley was five under fours over fourteen holes, but then broke down to return a card of 70.

Gene Sarazen, the holder, disappointed with a 72, while Archie Compston, the British hope, returned a similar score.

Nolan, the Irishman from Portmarnock who broke the course record with a 67 in the qualifying round, is up with the leaders. Though not playing the amazing golf he displayed on Tuesday he went round in 71. Jolly, of Foxgrove, and Robertson, of Dumfries, also returned 71's.

LIMITING RUBBER PRODUCTION

Negotiations Progress Favourably.

London, To-day.

According to the "Financial Times," authoritative rubber circles in Amsterdam state that the restriction negotiations are progressing favourably.

The recent visit of two Dutch members of the International Working Committee to London is stated to have yielded good results. It is understood that an official statement will be issued shortly.—Reuter.

NAZIS ONLY PARTY LEFT IN GERMANY

Centre Party Dissolved "Voluntarily."

PARLIAMENTARY SYSTEM ENDED

Berlin, To-day.

Dr. Bruening, a former Chancellor of Germany, yesterday announced that the Catholic group in the Reichstag, the German Centre Party, has dissolved itself.

The dissolution of the Catholic Centre Party marks the formal end of the Parliamentary system in Germany. The announcement of the dissolution does not indicate that the Centre Party has received any definite guarantees from Chancellor Hitler in return for their disappearance.

According to the Party's statement, it gives members the possibility of joining the Chancellor's National Front and co-operating in the construction of the new order.

It is expected that the confiscation of the Party's property and the arrests of its members will cease, also that the arrested members will be released. The statement expresses a hope that in future the members will be treated the same as Nazis.

The Party's Deputies will not go over to the Nazis en bloc, but each will decide for himself.

It is understood that Dr. Bruening and the other leaders will lay down their mandates.

The dissolution follows Chancellor Hitler's demand made last week. On Saturday last, all Catholic clubs and societies in Prussia, which the police regarded as political, were closed in pursuance with Hitler's policy to keep the Church aloof from politics.—Reuter.

SOVIET'S PEACE EFFORTS

Litvinov Leaves For Paris.

London, To-day.

The Soviet Foreign Commissar M. Litvinov left here for Paris yesterday. It is understood that his visit is at the request of the French Government to meet the French Foreign Minister, M. Paul Boncour and probably the Premier, M. Daladier.

The business is believed to be in connection with the definition of aggression contained in the convention just signed by the Soviet with representatives of 11 other countries, but which is not contained in the Franco-Soviet pact of non-aggression.—Reuter.

Ten Countries Sign.

London, To-day.

A convention on the lines of those concluded this week between the U.S.S.R. and various other countries was signed at the Soviet Embassy, London, yesterday, between the U.S.S.R. and Lithuania.

This is the tenth country whose borders touch the Soviet Union frontier, to sign a non-aggression pact with the Soviet.—British Wireless Service.

GOLD COUNTRIES ADAMANT

ROOSEVELT MODIFIES ATTITUDE

BUT NO AGREEMENT LIKELY ON CURRENCY STABILISATION

LONDON, TO-DAY.

THE DECISION OF THE GOLD BLOC COUNTRIES IN FAVOUR OF THE ADJOURNMENT OF THE WORLD ECONOMIC CONFERENCE, WHICH MAKES IT VIRTUALLY CERTAIN THAT AN ADJOURNMENT WILL BE DECIDED AT TODAY'S MEETING OF THE BUREAU, WAS REACHED AFTER A MEETING AT THE FRENCH HEADQUARTERS, LASTING FROM 10.15 P.M. TO 11.40 P.M.

After the meeting it was learned from French quarters that the gold bloc countries were of the opinion that President Roosevelt's statement, while representing definite progress, confirms the view that the difference between the United States and European viewpoints on the monetary question makes it most difficult to effectively continue the Conference at present.

Nevertheless, the gold bloc countries feel that the statement shows a definite desire for rapprochement and sympathetic collaboration which did not exist in the previous American declaration. The document is described as most conciliatory and one which, if the Conference were adjourned, would facilitate the continuance of work later.

THE QUESTION OF FIXING A DEFINITE PERIOD OF ADJOURNMENT WAS LEFT OPEN AS IT IS FELT THAT NO TERM CAN BE PUT TO THE MONETARY SITUATION. IT IS NECESSARY, FROM THE VIEWPOINT OF GOLD COUNTRIES, TO WATCH THE FUTURE COURSE OF THE AMERICAN DOLLAR.—REUTER.

Roosevelt's New Statement

REFUSES TO ALTER STAND ON STABILISATION.

London, To-day.

President Roosevelt's statement, transmitted to the Secretary-General of the League of Nations, stresses that he desires the World Economic Conference to continue.

He declares that he does not see how a minor issue of temporary stabilisation can in any way diminish the advisability of such discussions and urges the Conference to seek to mitigate the remedy for the evils of the present economic situation.

He promises American co-operation but declares that the revaluation of the dollar in terms of American commodities is an end from which the Government and people of the United States cannot be diverted.

The value of the dollar in terms of foreign currencies cannot be the immediate concern of the United States.

He urges that apart from stabilisation of currencies, other great problems are deserving of exploration.

The first task is to restore prices to a level at which industry and agriculture can function profitably and efficiently.—Reuter.

Washington-London Telephone Talks.

London, Earlier.

It is understood that the American representatives to the World Economic Conference were yesterday in frequent telephonic and telegraphic communication with Washington.

Many consultations between the leading delegates at the Conference took place during the day, but it is yet uncertain what course will be adopted, at the meeting of the Bureau, which is due to be resumed this morning.—British Wireless Service.

Unanimous Vote By Gold Nations.

Limiting Wheat Production.

15 PER CENT. REDUCTION DECIDED.

London, To-day.

Fifteen per cent is tentatively agreed as the rate for the reduction of wheat acreage in connection agreement reached in London between the United States, Canada, Australia and the Argentine, but this will depend on the crops. Exports are to be based on those of the last three to five years, and not on production.

The Australian, Argentine, and United States delegates are constituted a committee, and seek European co-operation. A reply to their request for co-operation is expected on July 10.

Separate understandings will be reached by the Soviet and Danubian representatives on the question of their co-operation.—Reuter.

Another Roosevelt Envoy To London.

Washington, To-day.

President Roosevelt is sending Mr. Lawrence Steinhardt, United States Minister to Sweden, who is at present in Washington, to London to-day, to afford fresh personal elaboration of the American position.—Reuter.

Industrials "Cheerful" On London Exchange.

London, To-day.

The London Stock Exchange closed yesterday with cheerful conditions continuing in industrial.

British funds declined about one-eighth.—British Wireless Service.

Mr. Justice Atkinson, the new Judge of the King's Bench Division, who took the place of the late Mr. Justice McCordie. (S. & G.)

THE WAR DEBT DISCUSSIONS

The Whole Issue, Not One Instalment.

SIR JOHN SIMON'S STATEMENT IN COMMONS

The Foreign Secretary, Sir John Simon, winding up the debate on the Foreign Estimates, in the House of Commons last night, referred to the American debts. He said that the approaching negotiations, the exact date of which was not yet fixed would deal with the whole subject, not one particular instalment.

President Roosevelt himself had made that clear, and had asked Britain to make representations to Washington as soon as they seek such revision of the existing agreement as compatible to the revival of prosperity.

U.S. NAVY WANTS U.S. $77,000,000

Modernisation Of Battleships.

"WILL THEN EQUAL THOSE OF ANY NAVY"

Washington, To-day.

The United States Navy will ask for $77,000,000 for modernisation of battleships, which will give the United States a fleet of battleships equal to those of any navy, stated Senator Swanson, United States Secretary for Navy yesterday.

The money is to come from the Public Works Fund.

The programme will include the modernisation of five battleships and increased gun elevation on two others.

Three battleships are at present being modernised, and seven are already modernised.—Reuter.

GOLD DOLLARS OR U.S. DOLLARS?

Repayment Of Chinese Loan Of 1925.

London, To-day.

In view of the action of the United States in going off the gold standard, bondholders, states The Times to-day, are most interested in awaiting the method of payment to be adopted for the half-yearly coupon due on July 15 upon the Chinese 5 per cent loan of 1925.

The loan was clearly a gold dollar loan and holders are entitled to the equivalent in gold dollars and should not be obliged to accept payment in depreciated dollars.—Reuter.

NARCOTIC SMUGGLING RING EXPOSED

Juda Ezra And Brother Plead Guilty.

CONSIGNMENT FOUND IN SAN FRANCISCO

San Francisco, To-day.

Mr. Juda Ezra, formerly a millionaire resident of Shanghai, and his brother, Mr. Isaac Ezra, both of whom were arrested in connection with a shipment of narcotics on the N. Y. K. liner, Asama Maru, have pleaded guilty in the Federal Court, here, yesterday, to violation of the narcotic laws.

Sentence has been postponed until September 9, pending receipt of further information from the Orient, regarding the smuggling ring of which the accused are the alleged heads.

The Assistant Attorney said that the Ezras had furnished valuable information to aid the Government to eradicate the ring's activities.

Three men and a woman indicted with them also pleaded guilty, and were remanded in gaol.

The consignment of narcotics seized on the M.V. Asama Maru, was concealed in old drums, and valued at $250,000.—Reuter.

HENLEY REGATTA OPENS

Surprises In Diamond Sculls.

AMERICAN SUCCESSES AND REVERSES

London, To-day.

The Henley Royal Regatta opened in glorious sunshine and in ideal conditions to-day. The river is at its normal height, with an average stream. There is no wind.

An early surprise occurred in the Diamond Sculls when Guye, amateur champion and Wingfield Sculls holder, was comfortably beaten by Coles, of Barclay's Bank, who is making his first appearance at Henley.

Two American entrants in the Diamond Sculls, Strang and Cutler were beaten by Savrel (Czechoslovakia) and Saurin (France) respectively, but Rutherford (America) beat Thompson (London) by a few feet.

In the Thames Cup, Quintin beat Princeton (America), but Hun School (America) beat First Trinity (Cambridge) in an exciting race.—Reuter.

SINO-JAPANESE DIFFICULTIES

Agreement On Truce Details.

Tokyo, To-day.

A message from Dai-ri-ten tells involved in the evacuation agreement regarding the details involved in the evacuation of the fighting zone has been signed.

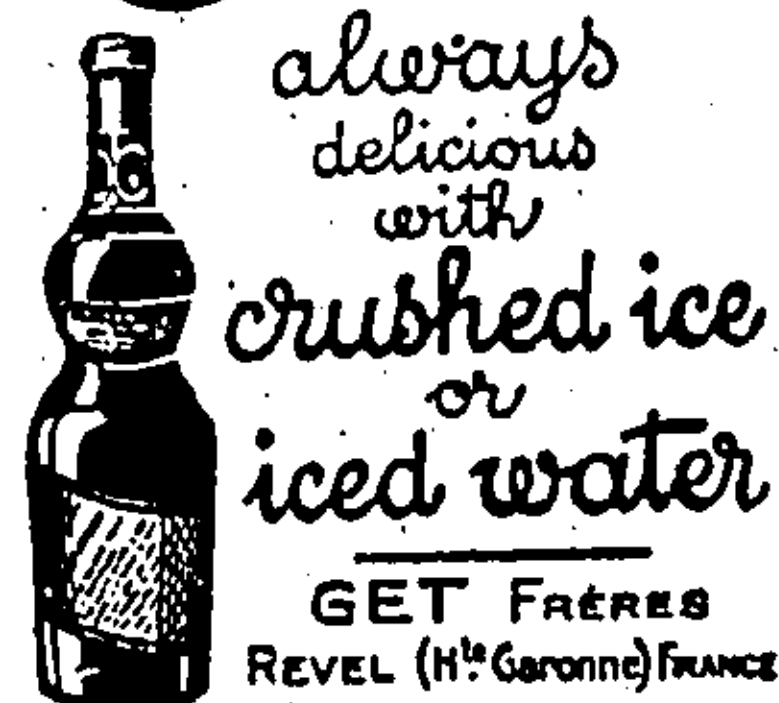

The agreement refers, inter alia, to the distribution of Chinese troops assigned to patrol duty and other work, as well as through traffic on the Peking-Mukden Railway accompanying the withdrawal of the Japanese troops.—Reuter.

New Hip Style Problem

Problem Settled By Paris Couturiers.

Paris. Paris couturiers certainly have done right by all the little Nells, who have been deep in thought as to what to do about their hips.

Hips just will cut, you know, despite the fact that hipless mannequins impress you forcibly with the edict that this is a hipless season.

Little Nell, after consulting the fashion doctor, finds that by concentrating the fullness of her skirt frontwards or backwards, making sleek bridges across the extended hip surface, that she comes out quite on a par of smartness with Hipless Helen, the platinum vamp who slithered through the salons of style physician's waiting room.

Even if you have hips you can wear a Mainbocher frock that is a mass of pleats. The blouse is done all over in soft knife pleats which continue for the entire skirt.

It is accompanied by a very tailored little jacket of white pique which does not fasten but which fits over the hips.

A stiff pique sailor hat with a brim and a band around the crown tops off the costume.

1933 GLOVE MODEL EMBROIDERED.

Pull-On Type Is Most Reliable.

Gloves of grey doeskin with ruffle cuff are smart with navy blue costumes. An innovation is the glove with side gussets embellished with embroidery. These side effects produce a smart flared line at the wrist.

With so many three-quarter and elbow length sleeves being shown on frocks and costumes for spring, the glove becomes an object for some serious thought. The pull-on type follows each season as the night the day, and is the most reliable of all glove-fashions, because it "goes with everything."

In glaze, kid-skin or doeskin in the new grays, buffs, beiges and fawns it is the perfect all-occasion glove.

Wrist treatments in the decorated type of glove favour the ruffle and modified flare cuff. For dress wear the conservative glove is still the smart glove.

Danger Of Wedding Innovations

Bridal Gowns Should Be Simple.

A bride usually considers that her wedding will be different from any of the weddings she has ever attended or any her guests attended. She is usually wrong. Custom has decreed that all marriages, if they are to be dignified and proper, must of necessity be much the same. Of course, we have had on occasion the unspeakable marriages performed on surf-boards, at walkathons or on horseback, but these present problems for a psychiatrist.

The bridal gown should be as simple as possible, made of conventional material as satin, crepe, chiffon, velvet or possibly tulle. It is always risky to go in for Russian coronets or Dutch caps, and heavy, unbecoming lace veils are apt to resemble nothing so much as window curtains. It's never safe to try innovations at a wedding.

NEW GLOVE MATERIALS.

Gloves may now be bought in any dress material. There are long, limp ones of printed crepe-de-Chine; short gauntlet gloves of coarse linen in biscuit or blue, and others of white pique and hand-knitted wool in an openwork design.

NEW MATERIAL WILL FIND FAVOUR.

Empire Wool Used In Manufacture.

EIGHT SPECIAL SHADES.

An absolutely new material which is bound to find great favour with women is "Tucray," the feature of which is the permanent tuck or pleat which is woven into the material which is 54 inches wide. Any width of tuck can be woven, and with varied spacings between the tucks. It is suitable for morning dresses, coat-frocks, afternoon gowns, tailor-made coats and skirts, long coats, hats, scarves, bags, trimmings—in fact its use is unlimited in the field of fashions for women's wear.

It is manufactured from Merino wool, from Australia and the Cape where the merino has achieved its greatest success. Wools from the Merino sheep of Victoria, Australia are the finest in the world; the greatest care is taken in breeding the sheep and the wool produced is milky-white.

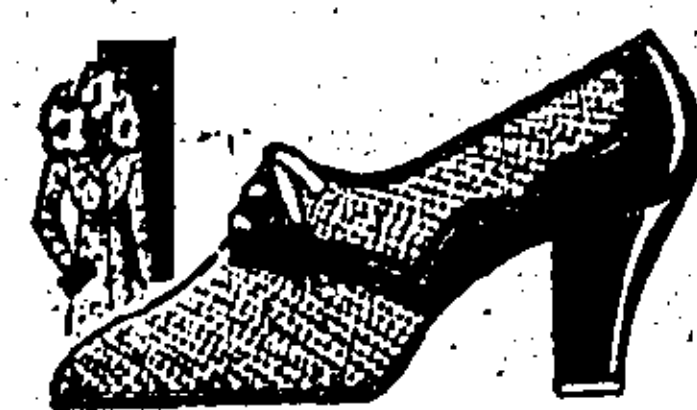

Tucray is made from this particular wool, and it is due largely to its exceptional milky-whiteness that the dyers have been able to produce with such perfect accuracy the beautiful delicate opal tones which help to make the material such a success.

The special shades which have christened "The Reville Opal Colours" are:—Opal Pink; Opal Green; Opal Lavender; Opal Mushroom; Opal Yellow; Opal Fawn; Opal Blue; Opal Beige. The Bradford Dyers Association have dyed these perfectly.

The designs for Tucray and the mechanism employed in its production are so arranged that not only is the "tuck" permanently bound into the fabric, but each tuck has a directional pile, like that of a gentleman's silk hat, which facilitates finishing.

The manufacturers responsible for the conception and production of this fashion-inspiring fabric are Wm. Thackrap and Co., of Castle Mills, Knarborough, Yorkshire, and a collection of Reville models have been specially created for the purpose of demonstrating the charm and practical utility of the material, when employed in various forms of day-wear and millinery.

In these models three types of tucking have been used:—twin, narrow, and wide.

(By ELY CULBERTSON)
World's Champion Player and

ART FOR ART'S SAKE

One of the chief of the many charms of Contract is the great variety of opportunity it affords for artistic play. Numerous occasions arise when the gain or loss of a trick or so is not material to the result of the rubber, and then one may try variations from the orthodox in play without the risk of grave recriminations by an obtuse partner should things go wrong. For example, when the opponents have bid four spades and one holds four Aces, one proceeds to make them without delay in order to ensure breaking the contract. But when the bid is only three spades at a love score, one may proceed differently.

The motto which forms the title of this article is a peculiarly appropriate one for Bridge players in these circumstances, for too seldom are they rewarded with the "plaudits of the crowd." Pretty coups are, as a general rule, followed by disparaging remarks from opponents about "some people's luck," and it is only on rare occasions that someone, who is both a judge of the game and a sportsman, says "Well played, Sir!" But those occasions, when they do arise, make everything else worthwhile.

It was my luck to play the following hand with two very good players behind me at New York's temple of Bridge, Crockford's Club:

West—Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

North.
Spades—9 8 4 3 2
Hearts—8 2
Diamonds—Q 9
Clubs—Q J 8 5

West.
Spades—A J 10 7 6
Hearts—9 4
Diamonds—A J 6 5
Clubs—10 4

East.
Spades—K Q 6
Hearts—10 5
Diamonds—10 8 7 4 3 2
Clubs—9 6

South.
Spades—
Hearts—A K Q J 7 6 3
Diamonds—K
Clubs—A K 7 3 2

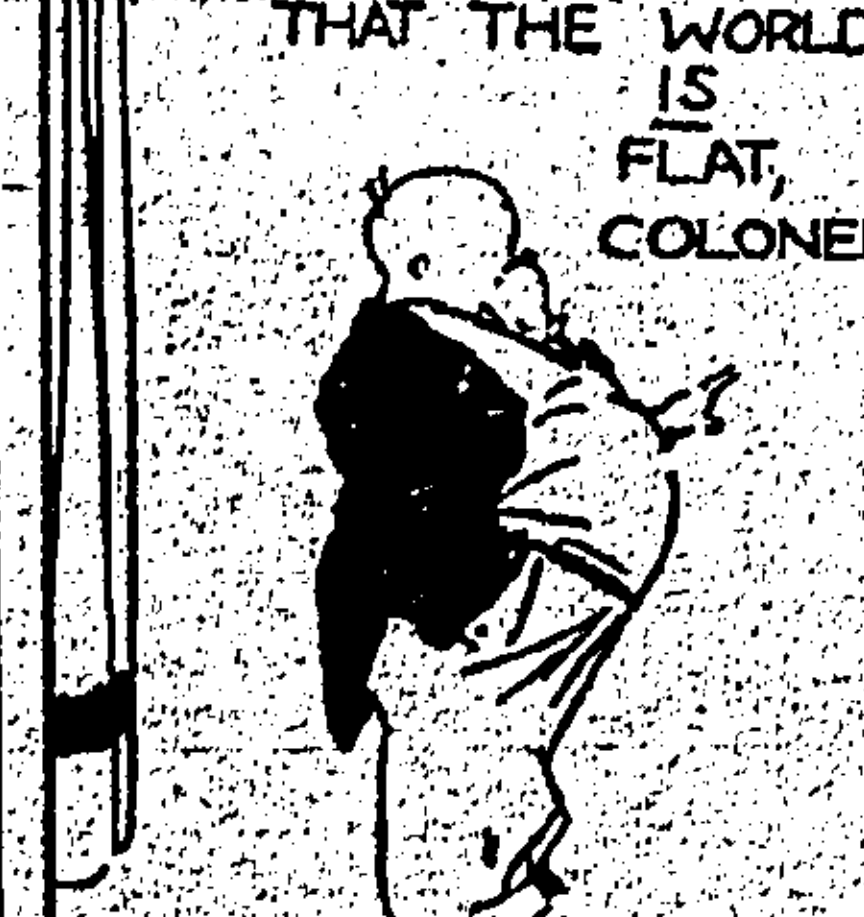

I was South. The details of the bidding have escaped my memory, but spades were bid by East and West, and the final declaration was six hearts, bid by me and doubled by West.

A glance at the four hands will show that the Small Slam in hearts cannot be missed, but West is apparently certain to make the diamond Ace. In the actual play, however, I made every trick. Readers may find it interesting to study the cards before proceeding further and to decide how they would have played with a view to making a Grand Slam. The Opening lead was the Ace of spades.

With the cards on the table, there is, of course, no possible means of evading the diamond Ace, and, in order to make my "seven-odd," I had to resort to a kind of hypnotic suggestion, being careful, in order to increase my chance of success, to play each card without the slightest hesitation.

Ruffing the spade Ace, I cleared the trumps, led out the Ace and King of clubs and then the King of diamonds. Without pausing to analyze the position, West immediately drew the inference which I intended him to draw—viz, that I had no more clubs and wanted to get into the Dummy hand with the diamond Queen in order to make the remaining clubs there. So he held up the Ace!

"Oh, very cleverly played!" two voices said in unison.

HYGIENIC method of Packing
ASPRO

PLANT.THE 'SANITAPE' METHOD*EXPLAINED.

The plant consists of the most up-to-date and efficient mechanical apparatus, including a number of 'SANITAPE' machines, which seal the tablets hygienically in specially prepared wax paper compartments.

This system is known as the modern HYGIENIC 'SANITAPE' method of packing, and because of its thoroughly protective properties, ensures that 'ASPRO' retains its original high standard of purity. This should serve to commend 'ASPRO' to all who appreciate the absolute necessity of purity in medicine.

The wonderful human-like 'SANITAPE' machines are one of the most ingenious and highly developed engineering triumphs of modern times. The machines wrap the tablets with unerring regularity in waxed paper, divide the paper into separate compartments, crimp each compartment so that no air can find access to the tablet, fold the tapes, and finally pass them through sprays of paraffin wax, effectively sealing the 'SANITAPE', and rendering the tablets proof against damp, moisture and any form of contamination.

ELIMINATION OF HANDLING

The 'SANITAPE' method of packing has a distinct advantage over the crude and obsolete system of hand packing. At no time during the process of manufacturing, compressing and packing, do 'ASPRO' Tablets come in contact with the human hand, therefore, contamination from this source is entirely prevented, the tablets reaching the consumer in the same perfect hygienic state as when they left the tabling machines.

'ASPRO' BRINGS SWEET SLEEP TO THE SLEEPLESS

There are many thousands of people who now have sweet peaceful sleep, who hitherto hardly knew the meaning of a period of restfulness. 'ASPRO' has brought about the transformation by its sweet soothing influence on the nerves, and breaking up of local feverish conditions. Two tablets before retiring is the usual dose.

STRANGE SUICIDE IN CAPETOWN.Worried by Possibilities Of Robbery.

Pieces of £1 and £5 notes, which had been torn into shreds, were found scattered about the floor of a bedroom in an hotel in Capetown in which a retired Rhodesian copper-smelter, John McGee, was found hanging from a fanlight with the window-cord tied around his neck.

McGee, reported to have been a wealthy man, left £6,000, believed to be in a bank in Bulawayo, to a brother and sister in Ireland. He had been worried about the possibility of somebody stealing his money and had even reported the maids at the hotel for "watching" him.—Reuter.

PROCESS.

The production of Acetyl-Salicylic Acid in its really purest form is a difficult and expensive process, requiring the services of highly skilled chemists. The cruder forms of this product contain free Salicylic Acid, which is expressly forbidden in the standards laid down by the British Pharmacopoeia, the guiding authority of the Medical Profession. The unskilled tablet maker may start with a pure drug, but by lack of the latest knowledge may turn out tablets containing free Salicylic Acid, liberated during the processes necessary to prepare the powder for compression. We make the following positive claim for 'ASPRO' tablets. THEY ARE MADE FROM BRITISH MANUFACTURED ACETYL-SALICYLIC ACID, FREE FROM ANY TRACE OF FREE SALICYLIC ACID AND CONFORMING TO THE TESTS OF ALL KNOWN AUTHORITIES. THE TABLETS ARE MADE BY PROCESSES WHICH ENSURE THAT THEY ARE OF THE SAME STANDARD OF PURITY AS THE ORIGINAL DRUG, AND CONTAIN NO TRACE OF FREE SALICYLIC ACID, NO CHALK, TALC OR OTHER MINERAL IS USED AS AN EXCIPIENT WHICH IN 'ASPRO' TABLETS IS A HIGHLY REFINED FOOD PRODUCT.

HOW TO TAKE 'ASPRO' FOR COLDS & FLU.

'ASPRO' makes positive, definite and clear claims that it will relieve an Influenza or Cold attack in one night and it proves it. You can prevent 'Flu' by taking 2 'ASPRO' Tablets at the first sign of a Cold, and 2 tablets every three hours afterwards until the symptoms disappear; a hot lemon or whisky drink to be taken with the last dose before going to bed. It is advisable when taking 'ASPRO' for Influenza and Colds to keep the body warmly clad in order to prevent chill. The value of 'ASPRO' for Influenza was proved in Australia when the Pneumonic Influenza Plague ravaged the country, and the Federal Parliament proclaimed 'ASPRO' a Necessary Commodity in the public interest.

ANCHORED BOAT ON ALLIGATOR.Georgian Fisherman Hurlled Into River

Midville, Georgia.
You have seen the same thing in film comedies, no doubt, and laughed at the absurdity of it—but it actually happened to Mr. Drew.

He was fishing in the Ogeechee River and rested his oar on what appeared to be a log near the shore.

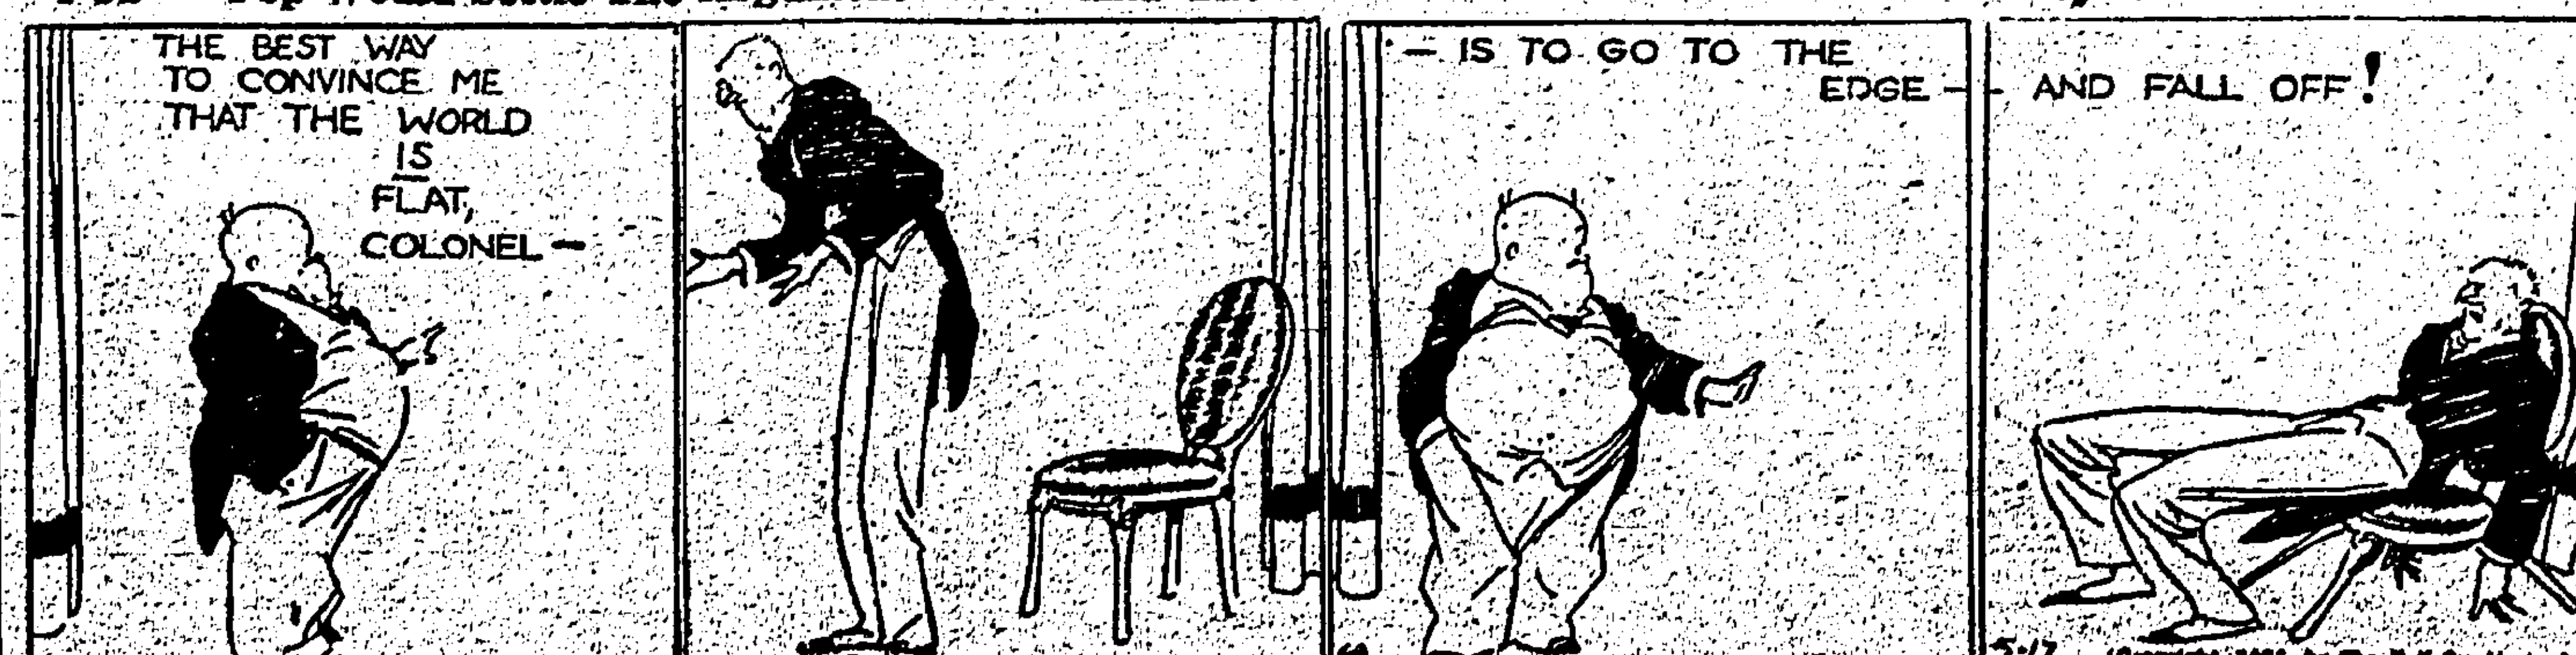

Suddenly the "log" gave a violent lurch, the boat was thrown high into the air and Mr. Drew was hurled into the river. The "log" was an alligator.—Reuter.

SOLDIER'S GENEROUS GESTURE.Australian Returns Dead Man's Medal.

Melbourne, Victoria.
In the heat of battle, an Australian soldier, now a Major, removed from the body of a German soldier, whom he had killed an Iron Cross and identification disc.

The Australian regarded the souvenirs as the lawful spoils of war, until he read a few days ago of the goodwill visit of the German cruiser Koln.

He visited Mornington, where the cruiser was anchored, and handed the trophies over to Captain Schneiwind, to be returned to the relatives of the dead man.—Reuter.

CONVOY BATTLE IN MEDITERRANEAN

Lesson From French Naval Manoeuvres.

WIRELESS A DRAW BACK

Toulon.
The bombardment of Toulon, the destruction of a wireless station and an attack on a convoy on its way from France to Africa have been the salient, if necessarily imaginary, features of the French naval manoeuvres in the Mediterranean.

"The Battle of the Convoy" in the open sea south of this base was the climax of these operations.

A Cruiser squadron led by the Colbert-nick-named "The Hare of the Seas" was ordered out of Ajaccio (Corsica) to attack and turn a convoy going from Toulon to Bizerta (Tunis), a distance of 300 miles. The Colbert's cruiser squadron was accompanied by five destroyers; the convoy was powerfully protected by three cruisers and seven destroyers.

At 10 o'clock at night the intercepting squadron got under way and steamed due west with all lights doused in true pirate fashion. The route of the convoy, which was going due south, lay about 100 miles to the west of Corsica. The Colbert continued to lead her squadron through the darkness till dawn. At 7.30 a.m. visibility became clear enough to get a distinct view of the horizon.

Against the skyline showed a little feather of black smoke. The "Hare of the Seas" surged forward and her cascading bow-waves rose steadily.

Warned by her scouting aircraft, the convoy steamed off at full speed, but the attackers succeeded in closing the range and forcing the convoy to run back for Toulon.

One lesson drawn from these manoeuvres appears to have been that a minimum of wireless transmission should be used, as it enables embarrassing accuracy.—Reuter.

SUITS DAMAGED IN WASH?

Dry-Cleaners Sued For $414.70.

Further evidence was heard before Mr. Justice R. E. Lindsell at the Supreme Court this morning, in the case in which Mr. G. W. Fischer, of Reuter Brockelmann and Company is the plaintiff in a claim for $414.70 from the International Dry Cleaning Company. The claim is in respect of four tweed suits and one palm beach suit, which he alleged they had ruined.

The allegation was that the defendants had not dry-cleaned the clothing but had washed them in soap and water, with the result that they had lost their shape and texture, and the colours had been spoiled.

Mr. H. J. Armstrong, represented the plaintiff, and Mr. J. B. Prentiss, appeared for the defendants.

Evidence was given Chan Fook Wing, the head dry-cleaner of the International Dry Cleaning Company, who said that he had personally attended to the clothes when received.

The usual method of dry-cleaning had been employed and he denied that the clothes had been washed.

Kong Sik Lin, the accountant of the Company, said that he received the clothes when they were brought to the Company on June 6. He noted that they were dirty and had spots on them, and he remarked of this to the "boy" who had brought them. He said that all clothes sent to be washed at the China Laundry were recorded in a book. There was no entry in respect of the clothes in the present case, and the clothes, he said, were dry-cleaned and not washed.

Ting Chiu Fan, Manager of the China Laundry said that the clothes were not washed at his laundry.

The hearing was adjourned until July 20, at 2.30 p.m.

NEW AIRPORT FOR SPAIN

Passenger Services From Bilbao.

SEVEN HOURS FROM LONDON

Bilbao.
A new international airport is to be established at Bilbao, Spain. An official announcement of the site is expected shortly, and it is hoped that construction will start immediately.

The landing-ground, which is expected to be at Lamiaco, near the harbour, should be available for public use in a short time.

Two hangars are to be erected, of which the first will accommodate two passenger-liners and three light aeroplanes. Later, a restaurant, cocktail-bar, and other "modern conveniences" will be provided.

Negotiations are on foot for the purchase of two bi-motored De Havilland Dragon aeroplanes, with seating accommodation for eight passengers each, and when these are delivered—it is hoped within the next month—passenger services will be initiated to Madrid, Barcelona, Biarritz and Paris.

The new airport, the distinctive mark of which will be "Bilbao" in bold white letters on the hangars and landing-ground, will be the first of its kind on the north coast of Spain. It will be situated within seven hours' flying distance of London.—Reuter.

SCHOOL-CHILDREN ON STRIKE.

Pupils Demand New Building.

AUTHORITIES ACCEDE.

Johannesburg.
Dissatisfied with the condition of their school-building at Brentwood Park, Benoni, more than 125 children went on strike and won the day. The children will now go back to their studies after having secured from the Provincial Administration a guarantee in black and white that they will be provided with a new school.

Some of the strikes rode round the district in a donkey-cart labelled "We strike for a new school," the inscription being roughly executed in both official languages.

According to the medical officer, who investigated the position at the request of the school committee, the walls of the school were filthy dirty and cracked. The ventilation was very poor and the children all looked pale and sickly. They were packed like sardines and the air was polluted.

The Administration has now promised in writing to erect a new school. Meanwhile the children will return to their old school and continue their studies there until the new school is ready.—Reuter.

CHINESE PILGRIM IN ROME.

10,000 Mile Walk To Holy See.

AUDIENCE WITH POPE.

Rome.
Joseph Louis Wei, a Chinese Catholic pilgrim from Singapore, arrived in Rome after walking 10,000 miles in two years and two months. He received an audience of the Pope.

As though in answer to his prayer when Wei got to Jerusalem he heard that a Holy Year had been proclaimed, and that his long pilgrimage to Rome would gain double significance.

Wei had many thrilling and painful experiences during his long walk. Near Rangoon he was captured by brigands, who beat him on the soles of his feet and left him half-dead on the roadside.—Reuter.

HELP FOR DEVIL'S ISLE CONVICTS

New Governor Urges Need For Changes.

PUBLIC INTEREST GROWING

Port of Spain (Trinidad).
"Hymns alone cannot make the convicts of Devil's Island resume useful lives. They need expert direction to take up civil occupations again."

This was the view expressed here by M. Georges Lamy, Chevalier of the Legion of Honour, when on his way to succeed M. Bouge as the Governor of Devil's Islands, the dreaded penal settlement off the coast of French Guiana.

Besides Devil's Island, his territory will include the whole of French Guiana, convict settlements on the mainland, and the vast inland regions where gold-mining is being carried on.

"I hope to be able to initiate a programme which will make French Guiana live again as a great Colony," M. Lamy said. "For some time there has been manifest in France a growing interest in the affairs of this Cinderella of French Colonies. The problems of the penal settlements have been discussed inside the French parliament and out of it."

"Public opinion seems to be working towards a gradual extinction of the penal settlements. They will go by two stages."

"The first will be a gradual suspension of the 'double' system by which convicts who have finished their sentence are obliged to stay in the Colony for a period equal to that of their original sentence."

"Then the Salvation Army in France is to send out an officer to see what can be done towards encouraging the ticket-of-leave men to resume useful lives."

"This cannot be done only by singing hymns. The hymns, no doubt, inspire them, but they need expert direction to take up civil occupations again. In prison they have that. When they have gone out hitherto they have been left too much to their own devices."

"Embittered by prison life, by the difficult climate, so many have despaired of fighting for a living out of the soil, and have sunk to the lowest depths, resorting to brigandage and plundering in order to exist."

"The Salvation Army hopes to rectify this, I am encouraged to believe that it may be able to do something, and I am supported in the hope for the programme of economic development that I envisage by the excellent condition in which my predecessor has put the finances of the Colony."

M. Lamy, who was formerly Governor of Madagascar, will reside at Cayenne, the capital of French Guiana, with his wife and three daughters.—Reuter.

MYSTERY BROADCAST TAPPED.

Alleged Secret Station In Bulgaria.

MESSAGES HEARD IN BRITAIN

Sofia.
Reports from owners of receiving sets in the South of England and the North of France have stirred the Bulgarian Police to action against a secret revolutionary wireless station somewhere in Bulgaria. The trouble is that the police do not know where.

Messages in the Bulgarian language prefixed by revolutionary greetings have been heard by English wireless amateurs and the authorities here believe them to be instructions to Communist agitators in the Bulgarian provinces.

The mysterious wireless station is also believed to be the means of conveying news of Bulgarian Communist activities to the Soviet Union; for some time the Russian newspapers have been singularly well and promptly informed regarding such occurrences.

The police here think that the wireless station must be in or near the capital. They have no special apparatus for detecting its actual whereabouts, but they are redoubling their efforts to trace these secret messages to their source.—Reuter.

MOTURING NOTES.PLYMOUTH CAR'S RECORD.

Crosses Desert Without Radiator.

TERRIFIC HEAT ENDURED DURING TEST.

Recently, in America's hottest and lowest area, appropriately called Death Valley, an automobile was subjected to one of the most severe tests ever devised to test the effectiveness of efficient fuel and correct lubrication. Stripped of its radiator and without a drop of water in its cooling system, the car, a Plymouth sedan was driven for ten hours across the desert.

Ten hours in the scorching heat, with the thermometer at 130 degrees F, was too much for one driver. Drivers were changed without stopping car or engine so that there would be no stop to the punishment to which car, fuel and lubrication were subjected.

Temperatures were abnormally high. The carburetor temperature was 176 degrees, the crankcase oil, 200 degrees, cylinder wall, 405 degrees, cylinder head 490 degrees. These are much higher than any car would encounter in actual service.

Soco gasoline and Mobiloil functioned perfectly. There was no vapour lock, no loss of power, no bearing failure and no scored cylinders. The tests confirmed in a dramatic way the laboratory tests of fuel and lubricant.

Following the endurance test, the car with full equipment, made a grueling 1,000 mile drive in second gear at 30 miles an hour. Then the car was driven on a rough, brutal jaunt, from Death Valley as far as motor-cars can go up the side of Mount Whitney, highest mountain in the United States.

The car is now on tour of leading cities of the United States. In each city it is driven for a considerable time through the city streets without water in the cooling system.

BRITISH MOTOR ENTERPRISE.

Morris Plant Completely Re-Organised.

Convinced that the best method of fighting trade depression is by enterprising action, Sir William Morris has, at considerable expense, completely reorganised and re-equipped one of his largest factories, and a new range of trucks is being produced. The details of these vehicles have been kept a close secret in spite of the exhaustive trials to which they have been subjected in different parts of the country, and to achieve this end such subterfuges as using old lorry bodies and various kinds of radiators on test runs have been resorted to.

The new models represent advance in design and in value, and Sir William Morris believes that this latest venture will be a success and have a favourable effect on employment. The anticipated influx of business will mean the placing of larger orders with the ancillary trades supplying material used in the manufacture of the trucks, while the increased spending powers resulting from these orders will have a beneficial effect in several parts of the country.

TAKING PETROL TO THE PLANE

For refuelling aircraft at any point on the landing ground, a well-known petrol company has designed an interesting tanker of 800-gallon capacity. Both tank and equipment are mounted on a special six-wheel cross-country commercial vehicle chassis.

If the vehicle happens to move while refuelling a plane, says "Motor Transport," a safety device automatically closes the main delivery valve. Another interesting feature is that if the vehicle itself runs short of fuel when away from a filling point the delivery pump may be used to pump spirit into the vehicle's petrol tank. First-aid equipment is carried in the driver's cab and also a detachable creeper track for use on soft ground or sand.

Another Record For Britain

2,773 Miles Non-Stop In Car.

In an attempt to cover the greatest distance without a wheel-stop, and without outside re-fuelling assistance, the Hon. Victor and Mrs. Bruce attached a trailer containing 100 gallons of petrol to their standard Jowett saloon car, and set off to run on the Montlhery Track, near Paris, to drive until the fuel was exhausted.

They finished the run after having covered 2,773 miles in 72 hours at an average speed of 38½ miles per hour. This is claimed as world's record for this type of run.

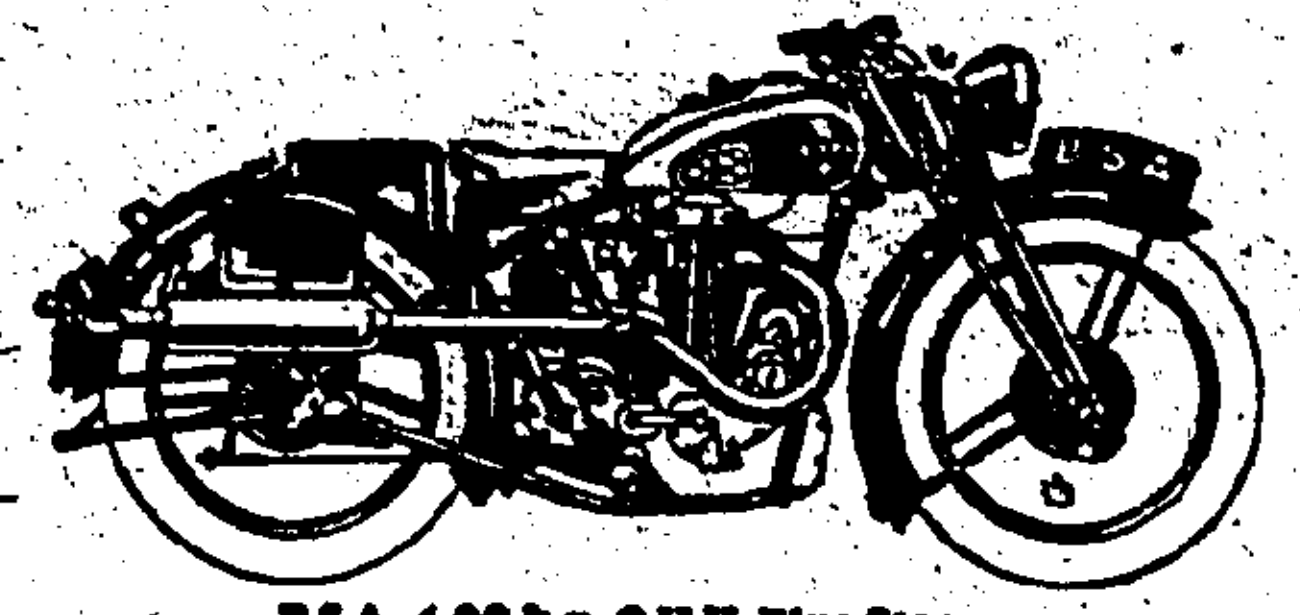

CAR CLASSED AS A LUXURY.

New French Tax Law.

The possession of a motor car will be taken as one of the three visible signs of revenue, for taxation purposes, under the French Budget proposals now before Parliament. The other indications are rental and domestic servants.

The law gives the tax collector power to refuse the sworn statements made by tax-payers and to estimate revenue arbitrarily on these three visible signs.

Thus, the man who possessed a modest 10 h.p. car would be assumed to have an income £70 higher than the non-motorist, while the unfortunate possessor of an out-of-date 20 h.p. car would find that the authorities had added £300 to his assumed income.—("The Autocar").

The House Of Commons.

The success of the National Government has reflected the spirit of the British people, and the Cabinet has deserved the whole-hearted support given it by the House of Commons. To those who look upon Parliament as a theatre for dramatic events it must seem a bad House of Commons, and the old hands watch with amazement the rapid progress of one highly contentious measure after another. When they see an unimaginative Budget accepted with a few murmurs; when they find that even those murmurs are stifled by a few slight concessions; when they see a challenging experiment like the Agricultural Marketing Bill passed in a few days, the Committee stage of a first-class measure such as the Police Bill practically completed in an afternoon, and apparently formidable agitations such as that for the repeal of the Land Taxes dropped after a single meeting in a Committee Room—then it is not unnatural that experienced students of politics should begin to wonder whether the Executive is exceptionally lucky or the Legislature exceptionally dull. Yet it would be a profound mistake to jump to any such comprehensive conclusions. Much the same was said about the first Coalition of 1918-22—and with far less ostensible reason, because in that Parliament the lack of an effective opposition was generously made good from among members elected to support the Government, who started and coursed hares in every field. Both the spirit and the circumstances of this second Coalition are very different from those of the first. Many of the present members of the House of Commons are young in years and independent in mind, but they cannot bring themselves to emulate the light-hearted empiricism of their prototypes of fifteen years ago. These have been sobering years, marked, in spite of some fluctuations, by the progressive deterioration of economic conditions in the world and by the precarious avoidance of disastrous deterioration in economic conditions in Britain. In such circumstances the preponderating motive in the minds of the mass of members is undoubtedly a determination neither to impair the power and prestige of the Government, nor to disturb the character of the National Government. That is why this Parliament is one of the dulllest in public, and yet one of the busiest behind the scenes which the country has ever known. It must not be thought that Ministers have as easy a time outside the House of Commons as they have on the Treasury bench; but these facts go far to explain why no private member has made any considerable personal reputation. They do not go all the way, because nothing in this Parliament is more remarkable than the position, for instance, won by Sir Austen Chamberlain, who certainly exercises more influence as a private member than ever he did as a Minister. On several occasions he has shown how a private member can combine impeccable loyalty to the Government with effective presentation of an individual point of view. It would, of course, be most unwise for the Government to presume upon this feeling of loyalty, which could not be so strong to-day if some of the Ministers in charge of the more contentious measures had not won for themselves very general respect and affection. To name no others, every one agrees that Mr. Baldwin is the cornerstone of this edifice of cohesion, and that he both generates and reflects the loyalty of the rank and file to the principle of a National Government. The strongest party man is bound to reflect that one who had so much to do with the breaking up of the first Coalition would not remain the foremost champion of the continuance of the National Government unless he were absolutely convinced that a return to party politics would be disastrous at the present time. But it is inevitable that the longer the life of a Government which was elected to act regardless of popularity the more potential the causes of friction with its supporters. There is, for example, much more dissatisfaction than has appeared on the surface about the general character of the Budget, the taxation of fuel oil, the trade agreements, the Exchange Equalization Account, and the administration of State relief to the unemployed. On the other hand there is probably less unrest in the House of Commons itself about Indian Constitutional Reform than appears on the surface. It is true that this issue remains the most dangerous to the future harmony of the Government's supporters. But it does not constitute an imminent menace, and many of those who are most inclined to be uncertain about the Government's proposals find a steady difficulty in distinguishing between Mr. Churchill's apparent readiness to destroy the Government and his claim to be the saviour of India. Mr. Churchill has himself created this impression by his attacks upon the Prime Minister. They may not weaken his effectiveness with local party organizations, but they have certainly done so in the House of Commons. It would not be fair to imply that the large measure of support for the Government's policy owes everything to the mistakes of its opponents, for Mr. Baldwin's resolute attitude has combined with the tactful steadiness of Sir Samuel Hoare to form a rallying point for moderate opinion.

HERE, THERE and EVERYWHERE

George Moore's Libel Fear.
Few people know why the late Mr. George Moore made a habit of publishing his books in limited editions.

In early life he was the victim of a libel action brought by a man whom he had never met or heard of, but whose name he had innocently given to a character in a novel. He considered that limited editions reduced his risk of repeating this misfortune.

Moore's passion for craftsmanship, which he carried even to the extent of having his works hand-set, was the outstanding thing in his literary character. When Shaw has ceased to rocket, when Barrie no longer peeps through the smoke-screen of limelight, when Wells's prophecies have all been fulfilled, George Moore's prose will live on, the favourite instrument for the torture which schoolmasters love to inflict on their charges.

A Revolutionary Artist.

Diego Rivera has quarrelled with one of the Rockefellers over the portrait of Lenin which the artist proposed to include in one of the immense murals he painted for Radio City.

Rivera is a remarkable Mexican artist with political tendencies of a revolutionary order. Some of his Radio City cartoons could be shown in London only at Olympia.

The most original mural in Radio City is to be found in the men's smoking-room. It consists of an immense map of the world and covers all the walls from floor to ceiling.

Running No Risks.

Breathless and excited, young Rubenstein rushed into his father's office.

"Fader, fader," he cried, "it's pouring with rain! Shall I bring in de men's trousers vot's hanging outside?"

"Vot you say?" queried the old man, who was very deaf.

"De men's trousers!" screamed Isaac. "It's raining—dey're getting wet!"

"Somebody wants some flannel!" said the old man.

"No, no!" yelled Isaac. "It's raining! Shall I bring in de men's trousers? Dey're getting wet!"

Then the seriousness of the situation dawned upon Rubenstein. "No, my boy!" he cried. "Never mind de trousers—dey'll sell for running knickers; bring in de waterproof coats or dey'll get soaked through!"

Doctor's Orders.

Smith arrived at the office on Monday morning with his arm in a bandage and a shield over one eye.

"Good gracious!" exclaimed his friend. "What have you been doing?"

"This is what comes of taking the doctor's advice," Smith replied, with deep feeling.

"Doctor's advice? I don't understand."

"Well," Smith explained, "my doctor told me to go for a tramp every day. I came off but the first three days, but the blighter I tackled yesterday was an ex-pugilist."

MY EMPLOYER, THE MAHARAJAH

BRITISHER DESCRIBES LIFE IN ALWAR

ECCENTRIC RULER HALF-GENIUS

(By Marcus H. D. Cockayne.)

The Maharajah of Alwar, who is absenting himself from his State for two years because of differences with the Government of India concerning the administration, has sailed from Bombay for Europe. This article, written by a former member of the Maharajah's household staff, vividly describes his extraordinary personality.

The private telegraphic address of the Maharajah of Alwar is "Alwarindra." It impressed me deeply when I understood its meaning. The Hindu translation is "God of Alwar."

I was about to enter the service of a god.

The manner of my becoming guardian to the three young wards of the Maharajah was in this wise.

I had been at Simla in the process of "axe-ing" myself after eight years' service in the Indian Army. I was sitting on the verandah of Pelti's Cafe, admiring the panorama of the Himalayan foot-hills. Suddenly my companion said: "Look—here comes the Maharajah of Alwar!"

He was a splendid figure of a man—tall, wiry, athletic, clean-shaven, with intellectual features. He was wearing a European suit, well cut but with exaggerated padding at the shoulders. On his head was the famous hat of his own invention—a kind of blue-velvet biretta with an enormous diamond star. This was my first glimpse of the man who was later to become my employer.

Having successfully "axed" myself, I decided to apply for a job in one of the Native States. Of two offers which came my way on the same day—one to command the army of a small State in Central India, the other to act as guardian to the wards of his Highness of Alwar—I chose the latter. For the Maharajah was a payer, and the potentate with the uncommanded army decidedly was not.

The terms of my engagement were peculiar. Three months' notice was required on my side, but notice of only one month from the Maharajah. Every month one-sixth of my pay was to be deposited in the Alwar State Treasury as a guarantee against my bolting before my time.

The State is about 100 miles from Delhi by train. I arrived there at about luncheon-time one day in December. I was met at the station by his Highness's assistant private secretary, a charming Englishman who bore a striking resemblance to the late Lord Curzon.

As we drove to the Palace in a dilapidated coupe my companion unnerved me somewhat by an account of a strange illness which had afflicted him. Pending my arrival he had been doing my job, and had unwittingly offended one of the Maharajah's more important visitors. Next day he was struck down by a painful illness. Superstitious sympathisers suggested that the ailment had been caused by one of the magicians employed by the distinguished visitor. Whether this was the case we will not discuss; but, at any rate, it is true that when subsequently the Englishman apologised the fever left him at once.

In spite of this awe-inspiring initiation I found my duties at Alwar far from irksome.

The Maharajah, half-genius, half-eccentric, is the most remarkable of all the Indian Princes. He speaks perfect English, but is severely critical of British rule and British institutions.

As an orator he has no equal in India. He is well-read in English literature, and has a thorough grasp of Indian politics. But he is incapable of curbing his extravagance, and he resents any attempt by the Viceroy to control his finances.

He is a Hindu, and observes the rules of caste with a meticulousness far beyond that of most Indian Princes. There is one injunction of his faith, however, which he has broken—that which forbids a strict Hindu to cross the sea. For he is widely travelled.

In his more confidential moments the Prince refers to the constant struggle between good and evil which he fights daily in his own soul.

He is a man of capable of great generosity and of petty meanness.

Life in Alwar, as far as the State officials were concerned, appeared to centre around the polo-ground. Near one corner of it was a conical rocky hill on which stood Lansdowne Palace, the incongruously-named residence of the Maharajah.

On another side was an impressive building called Janwasa, the ground-floor of which was allotted to my personal use. The upper was occupied by my three wards, one of whom, Rao Rajah Abbey Singh, recently came to London as a member of the Maharajah of Jaipur's polo team.

Every morning at 8 o'clock we all turned out for polo-practice. Although the ground was only a stone's throw distant, his Highness usually appeared in a magnificent limousine. All his cars were painted the colour of strawberry ice.

My wards gave me little trouble. I had to superintend their studies and intervene in any disciplinary disputes between them and their tutor. Occasionally I dined with the Maharajah. He was a charming host and a brilliant conversationalist.

Periodically, the Agent-to-the-Governor-General paid an official visit to the State. On these occasions the Maharajah, who resented the fact that he could not approach the Viceroy direct, was at his worst. He had to entertain his distinguished guest, but he seemed ill-at-ease, and spoke as little as possible.

My life in Alwar was spent mostly out-of-doors in every form of field-sport. His Highness had a magnificent shooting-box at Seriska, a few miles from the City of Alwar. When guests were entertained there, a goat was sometimes tethered to a stake a few yards from the house in full view of the windows. A powerful electric light was turned on the animal, and, in the likely event of its being seized by a leopard or a tiger, the guests had a close-up view.

Sport Plenty.

The Maharajah's Christmas-camp was a triumph of organised luxury. It was as if a small town, entirely under canvas, had sprung up in the middle of the jungle. Guests and State officials were housed in sumptuously furnished marquees.

The mornings were always occupied in pig-sticking, of which the Maharajah was a brilliant exponent. In the afternoons the entertainment was varied, the most amusing being partridge shooting from the back of a moving elephant.

WOMAN'S CHANGING FEATURES.

Faces Becoming More Sophisticated.

ART CRITICS' OPINION

Paris.
Woman's face is changing—so harder, more sophisticated expression.

This may be said to summarize the views of critics after comparing modern faces with those portrayed in the exhibition of paintings of 1870-1900, now being held here.

The half-closed, dreamy, kind eyes of the '80s and the full mouth of the '90s are said to be disappearing. Woman's face during the last century, it is claimed, was softer than it is to-day. The women painted by Renoir, Cabanel and Manet in the portraits now on view are said to show faces of more individuality, if less pliancy, than those of modern girls. There was no standardised face then, as it is claimed there is to-day.

Some critics, however, do not regret the transformation. "Very lovely—but lacks pep!" is the comment of an American critic the face of an old-fashioned girl. Reuter.

"TREATIES TORN UP"

League Defended in Foreign Affairs Debate

London, To-day.

During the debate on the Foreign Affairs Estimates in the House of Commons, last night the Labour Party Leader, Mr. George Lansbury, severely criticised Japan's policy in the Far East, and asked who was protecting British interests in Manchukuo. Japan had torn up treaties and had blasted her way through Manchuria he said.

Sir Austen Chamberlain thought that Mr. Lansbury overestimated the Sanctions part of the League Covenant. He (Sir Austen) would rather stress measures for the prevention of wrong.

When the trouble began in the Far East, he had great sympathy with Japan and thought that the League showed insufficient appreciation of the difficulties of Japan with the anarchical conditions in China, but as events went on, he concluded, that Japan had put herself increasingly in the wrong.

Japan's action in Manchuria was irreconcilable to the three solemn international engagements.

He asked the Government whether the Lytton Commission's suggestion might not take a place in Manchukuo, reconciling the interests of Japan and the Sovereignty of China.

The Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, Captain Anthony Eden, replying to Mr. Lansbury, declared that the League had no reason to be ashamed of its record. It is not a super-State and could not go beyond its powers, he said.

Regarding the arms embargo in the Far East, all countries did not possess equal legislative powers, and could not enforce it. Until they did, it was impossible to take steps for an arm embargo anywhere.

Regarding British interests in Manchukuo, there were consular officials there although there had been no recognition of Manchukuo.

Regarding Disarmament generally, he admitted that there was a risk in signing the Disarmament Convention at present, but there was also a risk in failing to reach an agreement on the Convention.

It was necessary first to bring such appeasement in Europe as to give nations sufficient confidence to sign the Convention. That needed the assistance of the whole of Europe, particularly those countries which complained of an inequality status.

The Labour member for Whitehaven, Mr. W. Nunn, was of the opinion that China would welcome any friendly action to put her house in order.

"Why could not America, Japan, France and Britain combine to get something done?" he asked.—Reuter.

London, To-day.

Asked in the House of Commons yesterday, as to what steps the Government were taking to inquire into the allegation that a Moslem girl pupil at the missionary school at Port Said was beaten to force her to accept Christianity, the Foreign Secretary, Sir John Simon, said that he understood the girl was beaten by teachers as punishment for rudeness and disobedience, and that there was no ground for the allegation made in certain quarters that this disciplinary action was an attempt to force the girl to accept Christianity.

The Acting High Commissioner had been in close touch with the authorities since the incident occurred with a view to the establishment of some kind of central supervision over certain aspects of missionary activities in Egypt, and an intermission board were also being consulted.—British Wireless Service.

Tirana.

All schools in Albania are to come under the control of the State, and the Government is empowered to establish a press censorship whenever it sees fit, under amendments to the constitution passed by Parliament and just promulgated by King Zog.

Any private schools that do not fall in with the new measure will have to close at the end of the current school year. Four Italian industrial schools for boys have already been taken over by the State.

The modification in the constitution will affect about 72 private schools, including a number run by American bodies, out of a total of nearly 600 schools. A number of foreign schools have long been established in the country and, under the Ottoman Empire, they were the only schools allowed to teach Albanian from 1880 until just before the Great War. An effective educational system was not established by the Albanian Government until 1921.—Reuter.

BRITAIN'S ATTITUDE ON AIR BOMBINGEssential For Police
Purposes.DISARMAMENT - DEBATE
IN COMMONS

Germany Criticised

London, To-day.

During yesterday's House of Commons discussion on the Foreign Office vote, Sir Austen Chamberlain strongly urged the Government to reconsider their policy in regard to air bombing for police purposes in outlying areas.

He agreed that in certain areas and under certain conditions, the aeroplane, as a fighting weapon, was the most humane instrument that could be employed because of the speed with which it enabled any spread of trouble to be prevented.

But the question arose now in relation to general Disarmament, and despite the extent of Britain's obligations in maintaining peace on the borders of civilisation, he did not see how she could ask other nations to agree to except her from rules applying to them.

Sir Austen, in another passage in his speech, vigorously criticised the "New spirit prevailing in Germany."

He said that he felt strongly on that subject because for many years he had worked his hardest, and not without some success, to bring Germany back as an equal into the community of Nations.

Now, he saw all hopes, if not destroyed, at least adjourned and delayed by this new German spirit.

If Germany wanted a revision of treaties, she must convince the world that a reasonable re-adjustment of treaties would satisfy her. As long as every speech made in Germany and every bit of their propaganda was menacing, inflammatory and one-sided, how could they expect that those whom by this propaganda they menaced, should disarm?

If Germany reverted to her early mood, showing a real desire for the fulfilment and a real intention to observe her obligations and if she would cease to menace her neighbours, she would then assure the world that in asking for Disarmament from those who had not disarmed, she was seeking her own security and not simply trying to reach a position in which she would be able to challenge any breach of the peace of the world.

Captain Anthony Eden, Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, replying to the discussion, said that he felt confident that all parties in the House of Commons welcomed the outcome of the conversations between the Foreign Secretary Sir John Simon, and the Soviet Foreign Commission, M. Litvinoff.

Referring to the adjournment of the Disarmament Conference, Captain Eden said that this was really a change of method, since, instead of proceeding by public discussion at Geneva, they were trying an interchange of views between the heads of the delegations under guidance of the Conference President, Mr. Arthur Henderson.

The question of bombing in outlying districts was, he said, one of the problems which would have to be dealt with when they came to the second reading of the draft convention. The policy of police bombing, he said, had been thoroughly examined for a considerable time and he was himself absolutely convinced that the Conference appreciated the immense strength of Britain's case in respect of this reservation.

He was equally convinced that for the British Government not to have put this matter forward and explained their difficulties would have been a dereliction of their responsibility in certain parts of the world.

Regarding the general question of Disarmament, Captain Eden said that their task was to seek to bring about appeasement in Europe and to give nations the necessary confidence to put their names to the convention.

It was a task on which the British Government would labour, but could not labour alone. It needed the assistance and co-operation of every other Government, more particularly of those who in the past had complained of their unequal status in armaments.—British Wireless Service.

To-Day's Short Story.

THE LUCK
OF CAPTAIN
FORTUNEBy Michael Arlen.

NOW it happened that one night, not long ago, Sheldene, having nothing better to do, rang me up and, complaining thus and thus, suggested that I should do the manly thing and dine with her. It was such a rare happening that I remember it all vividly. I remember I adopted an offended attitude, asking her if she thought I was the kind of man who was so lacking in dinner engagements that I could be rung up to take a lady out to dinner at the last moment. I asked her who she thought I was. I asked her to dine at the Ritz. But then, after a certain amount of talk this way and that way, we decided that we would be frightfully gay, and so we went to dine at the Ambassadors.

Of course, you know the Ambassadors. Everyone knows the Ambassadors. Everyone has passed through its mean but patrician-looking entrance in Bond-street, just between a jeweller's and a fishmonger's. It is, of course, a night-club, though there is nothing to prevent you going there in the afternoon if you feel that way. It is an exclusive night-club. Outside it are posted tall men in brilliant uniforms adorned with medals, and these men have the eyes of hawks, for it is their business to sift out the low and vulgar from the fashionable crowds that perpetually strive for admittance; they are the best sifters of their kind; and on any night of the week you will see at the Ambassadors all the quality and only the quality, toying with their food and calling each other by their Christian names.

The tables are elegantly arranged round the walls, deep sofas and divans are luxuriously set about them, while the centre is left unchallenged to the shimmering parquet floor. Of course all parquet floors shimmer, but none shimmers like this at the Ambassadors. One dines. One sups. Tommy Tittlebat's Saxophone Six plays. The quality dance. The more Tommy Tittlebat's Saxophone Six plays the more the quality dance, which is only reasonable. They jump up to dance at the exact moment when their food is put upon the table, and they cease dancing only when their food has become so cold that they have to hold lighted matches under the plates to warm them up. This causes much laughter.

RELATIONSVickers Employees
Still In Prison?

London, To-day.

The Foreign Secretary Sir John Simon, was yesterday asked in the House of Commons whether any of the Russian employees of Metropolitan Vickers were still in prison, and if so, whether he would make representations with a view to the reduction of their sentences.

Sir John Simon said that the duty of the British Government in this matter was one which they endeavoured to discharge in relation to British subjects. Representations to a foreign Government in regard to its own nationals stood on a different footing.

The firm naturally hoped that the considerations which had led to the release of all their employees who were British, might operate in favour of the others on behalf of whom intervention on his part was not possible.—British Wireless Service.

News In Brief.

A total of 10,511 general medical cases were treated in the New Territories during the month of June, by the St. John's Ambulance Brigade. Of this number, 1,888 cases were treated at Cheung Chau.

well-dressed nobodies with them, some bring Jews, some bring titled what-nots from the provinces or Labrador: so that by midnight the parquet floor is so crowded that you cannot see the parquet. Then it is great fun to dance.

The game is played like this. As soon as a man and woman, sitting at their table, see a clear square foot of parquet floor they instantly leap on same, and, passionately embracing each other thereon, make movements of their eye-brows, hips, and feet in time to Tommy Tittlebat's Saxophone Six. That is called dabbing. They stay on their square foot of shimmering parquet floor until they get shoved off it by a beefier couple, whereupon the two gentlemen compliment each other in an elegant way—as is the way with persons of ton—or they call each other names (not Christian names)—as is also the way with persons of ton—until one or other of them is thrown out. That is called enjoying yourself, and you have to pay to do it. I paid, on the night I am telling you about. But not even Tommy Tittlebat's Saxophone Six could drown the charm of Sheldene. Dear Sheldene.

TO-MORROW'S STORY

To-morrow's story will be
"The Portrait," by Aldous
Huxley.

At the table next to us sat a solitary gentleman. Obviously, we thought, he is waiting for someone, and obviously that someone has let him down. I am not much of a connoisseur as to men's looks, but Sheldene knows about these things, and she said he was handsome. He was, even as he sat, noticeably tall; of strong and manly appearance; and, though awarthy in countenance, so essentially English-looking that it was with a disagreeable shock that, towards midnight, we noticed that his dark eyes were wet with tears. There is, as a rule, a scarcity of six-foot men weeping over supper at the Ambassadors.

"Drunk," I suggested harshly, but Sheldene is a kind woman, and she said that he looked like a man haunted by a great calamity. "That's all very well," I said, "but one doesn't cry about things." Whereupon Sheldene looked at me, those wide and wise and witty eyes looked full at me—men have drowned themselves in Sheldene's eyes—and I saw laughter at all men playing in their dusky-blue depths; and I had to confess to those kind, mocking eyes, that I, Ralph Wyndham Trevor, had also wept, that I had sobbed like a child, and that a woman had seen me at it—the woman who had caused it.

"Exactly," said Sheldene. "For the more virile a man is the braver and the more adventurous a man is, the more likely he is to weep before a woman and generally make a fool of himself. Fetch me that handsome man, Ralph. Men in love are not generally very reticent, especially Englishmen in love. The reticence of Englishmen is as much an illusion as the good manners of Frenchmen. I am curious. Fetch me that handsome man, Ralph."

I leant over the table beside us. The tall, dark young man turned moist, absent-minded eyes upon me. "Sir," I said, "forgive this unpardonable intrusion. But my companion and I have observed your solitude, no doubt temporary, and would be delighted if you would join us in a glass of wine."

"You are very kind," said the tall, dark young man. He refused, with a courtly gesture, to take my seat on the sofa beside Sheldene, but sat on a chair opposite us. I filled him a glass of champagne.

"Sir," said he, "your health. And yours, madam."

But still the tears did not leave those dark, tragic eyes; they smouldered darkly in them. He looked infinitely wretched, though he bravely tried to smile as he addressed Sheldene.

"You must not think me unamiable if I do not ask you to dance, but I am not, to-night, in my happiest vein. You must forgive me."

He looked so very miserable that I was about to say something sympathetic when Sheldene kicked me under the table. She murmured something gentle across the table.

CHAMPIONS' TWO TEAMS WIN

South China Fortunate To Beat The Club

Craigengower Break
Their "Duck"

ONE MATCH POSTPONED

The Chinese Recreation Club, holders of the "A" Division Tennis League Shield, recorded a clean sweep win over the Recreio yesterday, while their second string maintained their 100 per cent. record by beating South China's juniors by 7 1/2 to 1 1/2.

South China "A", who are making a determined bid for the premier championship, just secured the verdict by the odd set against the Club. They were fortunate.

Craigengower broke their "duck" when they won handsomely against the University at Pokfulam.

The match between the Kowloon Cricket Club and the Indian Recreation Club was postponed.

RECREIO LOSE ALL NINE SETS TO C.R.C.

Remedios And Barros
Best Among Losers.

STEADINESS OF THE LO'S

The Chinese Recreation Club "A", holders of the "A" Division Shield, secured a clean sweep victory over the Club de Recreio, who are making their debut in the "A" Division this year, by 9 sets to 0 at King's Park yesterday.

Although the score gives an indication of an easy victory, many of the matches were very hard fought ones, and during one encounter between M. K. and M. W. Lo and F. J. Remedios and H. A. Barros, the latter pair led at one time by 4 game to 1, but owing to the erratic play of Barros lost the lead and set at 6-4.

The League champions were best served by Ho Ka-lau and Tsui Wai-pui and the Lo brothers, all of whom are Inter-Porters.

The latter pair were very steady. Their easiest victory was over A. V. Remedios and L. A. Ribeiro but they were fully extended against F. J. Remedios and H. A. Barros, whom they beat after a brilliant recovery.

Iu Tak-cheuk and W. C. Hung were the weakest of the losers, the latter being particularly weak in his service and half volleys.

The best of the Club de Recreio pairs was the C. A. Barretto-G. A. Noronha partnership. They gave the Chinese players their best games of the day.

Barretto possesses a very fine service and is an excellent all-round player. He has, however, one weak point, and that is his overhead work. He was let down in this department very badly.

Noronha was outstanding for his fine volleying and accurate placements, especially at the net where he was unsurpassed.

F. J. Remedios and H. A. Barros (Recreio):

lost to Iu Tak-cheuk and W. C. Hung 4-6

lost to M. K. and M. W. Lo 4-6

lost to Ho Ka-lau and Tsui Wai-pui 1-6

A. V. Remedios and L. A. Ribeiro (Recreio):

C. A. Barretto and G. A. Noronha (Recreio):

GOLDMAN AND SULLIVAN DROP VITAL SET

Wong And Luk Win
Game For S. China.

THRILLING TENNIS AT KING'S PARK

(By Ace.)

Leading by 3-1 at one stage of their game against Wong Shui Wing and Luk Chan Cheong, L. Goldman and A. L. Sullivan lost the set at 7-5 to give South China victory over the Club by 5 sets to 4.

The success of Wong and Luk, the Chinese No. 3 pair, was responsible for South China's unexpected win. They won all three sets.

At the conclusion of the first three sets the Club led 2-1. South China levelled the scores as the result of Goldman and Sullivan's lapse in the second series.

Luk Chan Cheong and Lee Wai-tsoi, the South China skipper, failed to produce the form that nearly accounted for Goldman and Teddy Fincher in the Open Championship.

Against the Club's No. 1 pair they were out-positioned throughout the game, and their continual lobbing, which was invariably short, cost them the set at 6-3. Meeting Sewell and Owen Hughes in their second game they again failed.

Luk Chan Cheong was the inspiration of the Luk-Wong partnership. He served well and showed versatility at the net.

Ho Wai Hing and Lee Woon Tsoi showed poor combination and were not seen at their best.

Goldman and Sullivan took things too easily in the set they dropped. They committed numerous errors overhead, Sullivan being particularly at fault. Goldman served three double faults at crucial moments, and it was his service that the Chinese broke through to lead 6-5. The Club pair, however, had the luck against them, two net balls in the latter stages going against them.

Sullivan displayed all his former accuracy in his ground strokes and made several splendid recoveries, but his overhead work was not so impressive. Goldman was undoubtedly the better player on yesterday's play.

Sewell and Owen Hughes paired well together, the steadiness of the former and the tremendous reach of the latter at the net securing two sets. After giving a very fine exhibition in the first two sets the pair were troubled by the fast falling light and lost a set which would have given the Club victory.

Wright and Wild, who deputised for Denis Hazel, who has just recovered from a bout of influenza, were disappointing. Lack of sting in their shots and weakness overhead robbed them of three sets.

Wild was slow on his feet and erratic throughout the games.

Luk Ding Cheong and Lee Wai Tsoi (S.C.A.A.):

lost to L. Goldman and A. L. Sullivan 3-6

beat R. H. Wild and C. A. Wright 6-4

HO KA LAU AND TSUI WAI PUI LEAVING

Champions Hard Pressed To Retain Title.

MEETING S. CHINA ON AUGUST 9

The Chinese Recreation Club may be hard pressed to retain their title against the stern challenge of South China.

Ho Ka-lau, one of their best doubles players, is leaving for Shanghai in a fortnight's time, and Tsui Wai Pui, the C. R. C. champion, is contemplating a brief visit to Hanoi two days after Ho leaves for the North.

The C. R. C. meet their Chinese rivals at Causeway Bay on August 9.

CHAMPIONS SECOND STRING WIN EASILY

Ng Sze Kwong's Artistry
Still There.

IU TAK-LAM'S PROMISE

The Chinese Recreation Club second string enjoyed an easy victory over the South China "B" at Causeway Bay yesterday, winning by 7 1/2 to 1 1/2.

Ng Sze-kwong, six times champion of the Colony, was well supported in Iu Tak-lam. Iu showed accuracy in his placements, and displayed a useful drive on occasion.

Ng Sze-kwong and Iu were the best pair in the match, and won their games comfortably.

Ng Sze-kwong, is still the perfect stylist, and his deadly back-hand cross-court drives often proved the undoing of his opponents.

Chiu Chun-chiu, former partner of W. C. Hung, and Ng Kam-chuen also won all their sets. Leung Sai-wah, became erratic towards the end of his games, and frequently gave away good points by faults at the net.

Kwok Hing-sam, however, made up for his partner's mistakes. In spite of being handicapped by his shortness of stature he, nevertheless, demonstrated a strong forehand drive.

For the S.C.A.A. Chan So and C. Y. Tso were the best pair.

The former played an exceptionally steady game and drove consistently well. His work at the net was also very creditable.

Chiu Chun Chiu and Ng Kam Chuen (C.R.C.):

beat K. F. Chan and Y. F. Chew 7-5

beat Y. W. Lee and C. L. Tsang 6-0

beat Chan So and C. Y. Tso 6-4

Ng Sze Kwong and Iu Tak Lam (C.R.C.):

His Last Race

HUGH O'NEILL, a grand old racehorse, ran in 127 races in his thirteen seasons on the Turf. He was placed in sixty of them and won twenty-seven.

Most of the famous jockeys riding to-day had had a leg up on the grand old warrior.

About two months ago he was sold to a farmer in Essex as a hunter.

The farmer found him delightful, though somewhat fast for Essex country.

The farmer had a suspicion that the old heart was failing. He determined not to hunt him again but to put him out in retirement.

Only a few days ago he put Hugh out to grass with three young horses. Late in the afternoon of the second day Hugh whinnied loudly and, with the youngsters trailing hopelessly behind him, streaked round the field in one wild last gallop.

Then beneath a big chestnut tree he pulled up and whinnied again. Quietly he stretched himself on the thick carpet of grass, and died. He was sixteen years old.

LOOKS LIKE KING KONG AS HE WINS TITLE

American Version Of Bout From Ringside.

SHARKEY SAYS LUCKY BLOW LAID HIM LOW AND HE IS NOT THROUGH.

(By Henry McLemore)

New York, June 29.

Looking like another King Kong, Primo Carnera of Italy, under the floodlights, with a thin smear of blood spattered on his face and his massive shoulders gleaming with sweat, heard 55,000 voices roar acclaim to-night as he knocked Jack Sharkey out in the sixth round of their scheduled 15-round bout and won the world's heavy-weight title, wrote Henry McLemore, United Press Staff correspondent from the ringside at the Madison Square Garden Bowl.

One almost expected him to place his foot upon his kill and give forth the roar of triumph of the jungle.

The end came dramatically. The bell sounded for the sixth round. Sharkey, who was waging a savage, wicked battle, and leading in points, came bounding back to the attack.

He missed a swinging right, and then moved close. A left blow to the belly had a magical effect on the Italian, who snorted with anger.

There was no attempt to aim his blows. Carnera's mallet-like fists raked Sharkey's body from his stomach to his skull, and pounded Sharkey through the ropes.

When he stepped back in the ring the Italian sent Sharkey spinning to the floor.

No Count

Sharkey arose without taking a count and retreated. Suddenly he turned, and the Italian unleashed an uppercut that cracked his jaw.

The Bostonian went down, and the fight was over. A convulsive thrashing of his legs was the only sign of animation. He was fully two minutes recovering from the finishing wallop.

The fight started with a bang, with the Man Mountain firing the first gun. He connected with a solid right to the jaw, followed by a hard left which sent the Bostonian bouncing into the ropes. Carnera took the round in easy fashion and received a big hand from the crowd.

Two-Fisted Attack

Sharkey came back from the bad experience of the first stanza with fury in his face. By means of a two-fisted attack he led until the fatal sixth.

He concentrated his attack on the body and heart, pounding the Italian heavily with lefts and rights. His blows were cleaner, but lacked steam to rock his bulky opponent.

The Bostonian took the second and third rounds. At this juncture the fans thought he would retain his crown at least by a decision.

This proved false, however, as Carnera sallied forth in the fourth round with sealed fists and mixed it freely with the Bostonian. The Italian mauled Sharkey and slugged his way to an even break.

Jungle-Like Tactics

In an effort to sway the tide to his favour Carnera became a little careless, resorting to jungle-like tactics. He held Sharkey and clawed him with a hefty right to the body, and was warned by the referee.

Effective and cleaner punches enabled Sharkey to annex the fifth. Determined to prevent the title from slipping away from the American shores, Sharkey, weighing 201 pounds, threw all sorts of blows in this heat and had the Italian, behemoth ochered considerably. The Italian put up a good defence and absorbed the blows he could not parry. The fifth round was the beginning of the end for the Garrulous Gab—Carnera, carrying 260½ pounds of flesh and bones, ran into Sharkey at the sound of the bell for the sixth and swapped punches with him. Using his excess weight to advantage, the Italian rushed the Bostonian and drove him to the ropes and there pumelled him.

Sharkey's Knees On Floor. Not content with this, he used his superior strength and pushed the Bostonian, the latter whirling around and his knees touching the floor.

Breaking away from Carnera's bull-like rushes, Sharkey whipped a powerful hand and landed a hard right, which whizzed like a bullet and grazed the Italian's shoulders. Undismayed, Carnera came back with flame in his eyes and unleashed an uppercut with all his might. The blow, coming up like a cannon-ball, caught Sharkey on the jaw and sent him to the canvas, face downward. After a count of nine the Bostonian attempted to rise, but was unable to continue the fight.

The crowd roared acclaiming the new heavyweight champion of the world. Immediately after the fight Sharkey told the United Press that the blow that struck him was a lucky punch.

"I am not through with boxing," he said.

"I gave Carnera another chance after beating him in 1931. I hope he will give me a chance to regain the title."

Italy A Boxing Power

Carnera's victory, which was made in a convincing fashion, not only gave him the world title, but also made Italy a power in the boxing world.

In winning the crown Carnera became the second foreigner to become world's heavyweight champion.

The only other foreigner fighter ever to hold the title was Max Schmeling of Germany who gained the honour after winning on a foul from Sharkey in 1930.

When Carnera and Sharkey met two years ago, the former was still working his way up the ladder in the heavyweight division, and the latter already the foremost contender.

59 Knock Outs in 78 Bouts. Carnera's knockout win to-night was one of the many victories he won in that fashion. Out of less than 78 bouts he had engaged in he won at least 59 by knockouts, including the one to-night.

The bout was Sharkey's first title defence since winning the championship from Schmeling last June. The Bostonian's annexing the title followed a long successful career, married only by knockout defeats at the hands of Romero Roas in 1924 and Jack Dempsey in 1927.

Sharkey risked his crown against Carnera in an attempt to clear his name of a loud chorus of criticism surrounding his questionable victory over Schmeling that gave him the championship.

Immediately after the fight to-night, cauliflower lanes began buzzing with rumours that an attempt will be made to bring Carnera and Max Baer, conqueror of Schmeling, together.

Vines won the Wimbledon title last year when on his first visit to England. He beat Crawford in the Semi Final.

E. D. Andrews, who was seen in exhibition matches in the Colony last September, and A. Stedman, the New Zealand pair who eliminated Stoeffen and Sutter in sensational manner, met their match in the German Davis Cup pair.

Elizabeth Ryan recorded two wins yesterday. In partnership with Mme. Mathieu, the French champion, she beat Kathleen Stammers and Mile. Jedrzewski, the Polish seeded singles player, for the loss of three games. In the Mixed Doubles Miss Ryan and Enrique Maier, the versatile Spaniard, eliminated R. Nuno and Miss Noel after an exciting struggle. Miss Ryan is in the No. 1 ranking pair in both tournaments.

Nuno and Miss Noel, the Anglo-Japanese combination, put up one of the pluckiest fights against the holders. Nuno did the work of two, frequently leaving his opponents standing with spectacular middle court smashes and cunning drop shots.

R. Miki, the well-known Japanese player resident in London, and Dorothy Round, the British woman semi-finalist, beat Don Turnbull, the Australian doubles player, and Helen Jacobs, another semi-finalist, in a fluctuating match.

CRICKET SENSATION IN ENGLAND.

Gentlemen v. Players Match Cancelled.

London, To-day. Considerable surprise was caused in cricket circles yesterday when the announcement was made that the Gentlemen v. Players match at the Oval, scheduled to commence yesterday at the Oval, had been cancelled owing to the difficulty of raising teams.

Dating back to 1806 this encounter is played three times in a season. This year only two matches have been arranged, the second being at Lord's on July 19. Of the 231 matches played the Players have won 101 and the Gentlemen 63. One game ended in a tie and 66 have been unfinished.—Reuter.

AUSTRALIA'S BEST HORSE.

Indian Owner Offers $5,500 For Winooka.

It is just sheer bad luck—that racing enthusiasts in India will not see Australia's wonder horse, Winooka, in action.

A buyer from India, whose name was not disclosed, recently offered $5,500 for Winooka, but the offer was rejected by the owners who will take the champion to America at the end of this month.

Winooka recently broke the Australian record for the mile and goes to America as the fastest horse in Australia.

One proposal under consideration is that at the end of the American tour the owners will, subject to legal sanction, issue five dollar tickets to the extent of $100,000 for the disposal of the horse.

The Luck Of Captain Fortune

"You are so kind and sympathetic," whispered the handsome stranger, "that I will tell you a story. You are sure it won't bore you?"

"We said we were quite sure, and I filled him a glass of champagne."

"Sir," said he, "your health. And yours, madam."

"My story," he addressed us, "concerns a man and a woman. The man loved the woman. I call her a woman because all words are vain, and to call her a goddess were but to lay myself under the charge of affectation. But if I were to tell you her name, which of course I cannot do, except to say that it rhymes with custard, you would instantly agree with the most abandoned epithets for her beauty; for she is one of the best loved ladies in the land, by reason of her high birth, her peerless carriage, and her amazing loveliness. I tell you, she has no rival in the present, nor can history tell us of her like. If the Lady Circe had had golden hair, which I much doubt, perhaps she may have been a tithe as lovely. It is, as you know, said of the Lady Circe that she turned men into swine, but this lady turns swine into men, and what could be more agreeable than that? It was ever her innocent delight to improve the men she met; and, with such beauty, was there anything she could not do with men? Her beauty appeals the epithet. She is divinely tall, gold is but brass beside the sheen of her hair, and white samite is grey beside her complexion. She is, without doubt, the loveliest woman in England—which, of course, also includes America, for all lovely American women live in England even though they may die in Paris."

"The man met this lady and instantly loved her. Now, his was no casual passion. She was young, but the war had already widowed her, and she seemed not unaware of, nor entirely repelled by, her new suitor's passion, for from her many suitors she chose him as her constant companion. Thus rumour very soon came to link their names, and rumour, generally so malignant, was then kind enough to find something harmonious in the alliance of that pair. For he was a man of unusual height, of a good name, a distinguished military record, and looks which some have thought handsome while none have denied to be very properly suited to the requirements of an English gentleman."

"She did not, at first, wholly accept him. But no day passed that they did not meet, and, as day exquisitely strung itself to day so that each was another pearl on the necklace of an Olympian goddess, she seemed, by sudden gestures, by sudden impulse, to be growing to love him—the loveliest lady in the world! And he was happy—oh, God, he was happy!"

The handsome stranger fell silent, and I thought he was about to break down. I filled him a glass of champagne.

"Sir," said he, "your health. And yours, madam."

"I have told you," he went on, "of her amazing beauty, the golden-white beauty of the world's last aristocracy. But, as though that were not enough, she was ambitious; she was a lady of parts, and she increasingly sought the company of those with whom she could discuss, deeply and seriously, the current problems of this vexed time. She was, you understand, tremendously interested in improving people; and politically she was, of course, a Die-hard, for, as the daughter of a great house, her earliest experience in literature was the "Morning Post," to which she had remained faithful even when she grew up, with that tenacity peculiar to all readers of that remarkable journal. And so, when the franchise was extended to women, she, even before Lady Astor, raised the standard of rampant womanhood; and the world was given the rare sensation of seeing, and the House of Commons the rare privilege of welcoming, among its foremost legislators, the loveliest lady in the land, or any land."

"Words cannot describe the effect she made as she stood, indisputably the first of the twelve other ladies who had won their right of entrance into the Lower House, in all her glorious height and golden beauty among the dolorous decorations of that crypt which the glamour of centuries has raised to the majesty of Britain's greatest institution."

"It was at this time that the man I have referred to came into her life; and it changed for her to be a fortunate occasion, for without him her political career had been a barren thing. She could not make up a speech. Memorise and speak a speech she could, so amazingly well that the populace cried out with wonder at one so gifted with brains and elocution as well as with beauty—but she could not make up a speech. The brains in her speeches, which were rapidly winning it her a foremost position among the Die-hards, were not hers. Her friend wrote her speeches for her. He did them gladly, happy and honoured to be of use to her. He 'helped' her with her speeches, so that she seemed not to be aware that his was every idea, every phrase, every epigram, everything—and that was his greatest pleasure, his subtle 'helping' her to a place of honour and esteem for something besides her beauty. Himself, though a gentleman, was not a Die-hard; he was a man of ideas. He had a brain like Clapham Junction, going this way and that way and every way at the same time; and he could, no doubt, have made a great political name for himself, but he was by nature a soldier and by temperament adventurous, so that it pleased him infinitely more to 'help' the lady of his dreams to political fame rather than to bid for it in his own person."

"But another soldier came into her life—the most fearless soldier of our time, it has been said. But whether it was that he was the most fearless or the luckiest we cannot tell. He himself insists on his luck. 'I cannot lose,' he is reported to have often said, sometime unhappily. Whatever he touched became a jewel in his hand; whatever he ventured he won. A name never expressed a man more perfectly—Victor Fortune! Captain Fortune, V.C., D.S.O., M.C., etc."

"He saw her first from the Strangers' Gallery in the Lower House. He was, of course, familiar with her beauty—how often had he not seen portraits of her in the fashionable journals of the day!—but her face had hitherto failed to attract him, because of a certain coldness, a certain rapidity, which only his fastidious taste has chosen to discover in it. But those were photographs—now, from his obscure seat in the Gallery, Captain Fortune looked down upon the fairest figure the mind of man could conceive."

"It was the afternoon set apart for the discussion on Fabric Gloves, and the loveliest woman of our time excelled herself in her speech; or, rather, her friend had excelled herself. Captain Fortune, gazing down upon that tall and golden figure, a light in that dark pit of legislation, was enthralled—and yes, appalled—by her beauty and her wit. It had needed only her wit, her culture, to add that vivacity to her perfect features which would enslave Captain Fortune's fastidious heart—Victor Fortune, who never ventured but he won! He met the lady that night, at Lady Savoury's ball in aid of the Bus Conductors' Orphanage."

"Three weeks later her old friend, her 'helper,' was stunned to read in the "Morning Post" of the engagement of the lady to Captain Fortune, V.C., D.S.O., M.C., etc. He was stunned; then, frankly, he rushed to her house. She was not yet fully dressed; she received him with pretty confusion. She was very sorry about it all, she said. She was frightfully sorry, she said. But she had fallen in love. Victor Fortune was so fine, so magnificent—and it needed but her love and care to help him combat his few weaknesses, which might be counted human in other men but were unworthy and degrading in such a man as Victor Fortune."

"And so he went away, her friend, never to return. He never was returned. He never will return, for thus it is written. And Captain Fortune, who never ventured but he won, married. His lady, the lady of his dreams."

"What could we say? We could only say that we were very sorry, very sorry, but his lovely lady had already told him that and it did not seem to have soothed him. Tears smouldered in those dark eyes, and I thought: he was going to break down. I filled him a glass of champagne."

"Sir," said he, "your health. And yours, madam."

"Of course," he whispered, "she has never been able to make a speech, has she? How could she? Without her old friend she is just

SILVER DECLINES ON WALL ST.

Good Buying Reported.

New York, To-day.
Silver prices opened higher on Wall Street yesterday, reacting on the advance in London and much higher sterling. Later profit-taking, however, in spite of good buying, caused a decline.

Rails maintained their recent strength, rising 98 to 54.36. Industrials and utilities declined
1.03 and .76 to 102.74 and 35.66 respectively, while bonds declined
.01 to 86.73. Business was brisk,
5,800,000 shares being traded.—
